- [H4] The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention protocols for respiratory etiquette recommend that patients with undiagnosed respiratory symptoms wear face masks in waiting rooms. That means active pediatric practices and hospital admission or waiting areas should have a child-size mask available for kids. This was the first mask designed specifically to fit small faces. Understanding that adult masks don't provide the fit, comfort and protection children need, Halyard Health has the FIRST pediatric mask that meets FDA Guidelines for use with children. It's your clear choice for helping protect patients from colds, flu and other respiratory threats.

- [H4] ASTM issues guidelines for performance of medical face masks, including a requirement for fluid resistance and particulate filtration. ASTM F2100-11 standards also call for mask packaging to be clearly labeled with the level of protection in one of three levels: 1, 2 or 3. This standard reinforces the importance of labeling to identify protection level, based on fluid resistance, filtration and breathability. This greatly simplifies the process of mask selection. ASTM F2100-11 is recognized by the FDA as the standard for medical face masks.
